2. Expiry of the object for which the company was established or the impossibility of its achievement.
3. Transfer of all shares or equities to one of the partners or shareholders less than minimum limited prescribed in the law.
4. Decay of all or major part of the properties of the company so that it become impossible to invest the remaining part feasibly.
5. Consensus of the partners for the dissolution of the company before its period is expired, unless the articles of association of the company stipulates its dissolution with a particular majority.
6. Merger of the company in other company.
7. Issue of judicial order with dissolution of the company or declaration of bankruptcy.

Article (284)

The court may judge with dissolution of any company form joint or limited partnership or particular partnership company based on the request of one of the partners, if there are serious reasons justifying the same. All the terms preventing the partners from using this right will be invalid.

If the reasons that justify the dissolution are resulted from the acts of one of the partners, the court can adjudge with his oust from the company. In this case the company will continue with other partners.

The share of the partner who is ordered to be ousted from the company as per its value on the day of ousting. This share will be paid to him by cash. This partner will not have any share in the new rights unless it is resulted from the operation precedent to the reason for ousting.

Also the court is entitled to order with the dissolution of the company based on the request of one of the partners due to the failure of any partner to fulfill what is undertaken by him.

Article (285)

The joint or limited partnership or particular partnership companies will be dissolved by the death of one of the partners or issuance of ban on him or declaration of his bankruptcy or inefficiency or his withdrawal from the company. However, the articles of association of the company may include a text stating that if one of the partners dies the company will continue with his heirs, even if they are minors.

If the withdrawal of the partner is under bad faith or in an unsuitable time, the judgement can be obtained for the continuation in the company in addition to the compensation when needed.

Article (286)

If no provision is given in the articles of association of a joint company or limited partnership company or particular partnership company regarding the continuation of the company in case of withdrawal of one of the partners or his death or issuance of ban order or declaration of bankruptcy or inefficiency the partners within sixty days from the occurring the above cases should decide consensually the continuation of the company. This agreement will not be applicable on others until it is declared in the commercial registry for the joint and limited partnership companies.

In all cases of continuation of the company with the remaining partners, the share of the partners who left the company will be calculated as per the last inventory, unless the articles of association of the company stipulates an other method for calculation.

This partner or his heirs will have no share in the new rights of the company except those rights resulted from operations precedent to his exit from the company.

Article (287)

If the losses of the shareholding company reach to half of the capital, the board members should invite the extraordinary general assembly to look into the continuation of the company or its dissolution before the period fixed in the statute of the company.

If the board of directors didn't invite the extraordinary general assembly or a decision in the matter couldn't be reached, every party who has the interest thereof can request from the court to dissolve the company.

Article (288)

If the shareholding company is dissolved for the reason of transferring all the shares to a single shareholder, this shareholder will be responsible for the liabilities of the company to the extent of its assets.

If one complete year passes on the reduce of the number of the shareholders to below the minimum limit, every party who has the interest can request from the court to dissolve the company.

Article (289)

The limited liability company will not be dissolved by the withdrawal of one of the partners or his death or issuance of ban order or declaration of bankruptcy or inefficiency unless the articles of association of the company stipulates otherwise.

Article (290)

Should the losses of the limited liability company reach to half of the capital, the managers within thirty days from reaching the loss to this extent should submit the issue of covering the capital or dissolution of the company to the partners assembly. The issuance of dissolution decision should meet the majority necessary for amending the articles of association of the company.

If the managers neglect to invite the partners or the partners failed to reach to a decision in the matter, the managers or the partners as the case may be jointly responsible for the liabilities of the company resulted from their negligence.

Article (291)

The equities partnership company is dissolved by the withdrawal of one of the joint partners or his death or ban or declaration of his bankruptcy or inefficiency unless otherwise stipulated in the statute of the company. If no clause is stipulated in the statute of the company in this regard, the extraordinary general assembly may decide the continuation of the company. The procedures prescribed for the amendment of the company statute is followed in this regard.

Article (292)

If the withdrawal or death or ban or bankruptcy or inefficiency includes all the joint partners in an equities partnership company, the company must be dissolved unless the statute of the company stipulates the possibility of transferring the company to any other type of company.

Article (293)

The equities partnership company will be dissolved for the reasons by which the shareholding company is dissolved, considering the fact that if the reason of dissolution is the transfer of ownership of all shares to one of the partners and this partner was a joint partner, then he shall be responsible in his all properties for the debts of the company.

Article (294)

Excluding the partnership company, the decision of dissolving the company, in all cases, should be declared in the commercial registry and published in two local dailies published in Arabic. This decision will not be applicable to others until it is published. The managers of the company or the chairman, as the case may be, should follow up the execution of this procedure.

The staff of the company will exist during the liquidation period and their authorities will be limited in the areas that do not include in the competence of the liquidators.

Article (297)

The company will be dissolved in accordance with the provisions mentioned in the articles of association or statute or what is agreed by the partners at the time of dissolution of the company. If no text or agreement is available in this regard, the provisions of the following articles from this section to be followed.

Article (298)

The liquidation will be carried out one or more liquidators appointed by the partners or general assembly with normal majority needed for issuing the decisions of the company.

If the liquidation is forced by a judgement, the court will define the method of liquidation as it appoints the liquidator. Under any circumstances, the duty of the liquidator will not cease with the death of the partners or declaration of bankruptcy or their inefficiency or attachment even if he was appointed by them.

The liquidator will have a wage prescribed in the appointment letter or as defined by the court.

Article (299)

The liquidator must declare the decision of his appointment, the limits imposed on his authorities, agreement of the partners or the decision of the general assembly as to the method of liquidation or the judgement issued in this regard, using the same method prescribed for amending the articles of association of the company or its statute.

The appointment of the liquidator or the method of liquidation will be applicable for the third parties with effect from the date of declaration.

Article (300)

If the liquidators are multiplied they should work together unless otherwise instructed by the party which appointed them.

They will be collectively responsible to compensate the company, partners and third parties for the violation to the limits prescribed for them or the mistake committed by them during the performance of their duties.

Article (301)

The liquidator will carry out all the works required by the liquidation, particularly the following:

1. Collect the rights of the company with others.
2. Settle the debts of the Company
3. Sell the movable or immovable properties of the Company in auction or any other method that guarantees maximum price unless the liquidation document stipulates a particular method for the sale.
4. Do all necessary acts to keep the properties and rights of the company.
5. Represent the company before the judiciary and accept the reconciliation and judgement.

Article (302)

The liquidator is not allowed to start new business unless it becomes necessary to complete the previous business. If the liquidator carries out any new business which is not required for the liquidation, he shall be responsible in his private properties for this business. In case of multiplied liquidators they will undertake the responsibility collectively.

Article (303)

The periods of all debts on the company become due immediately after the dissolution of the company. The liquidator will notice all the creditors under registered letters about the commencement of liquidation and invite them to submit their demands. The notice can be given through two dailies published in Arabic if the creditors are unknown or their address is not known. In all cases the notice should include grace period for the creditors to submit their demands in the liquidation minimum seventy five days from the date of notice, provided that the notice should be repeated after one month from the validity. If some creditors fail to submit their demands their dues should be deposited in the treasury of the court until the owners appear or the period is expired.

Article (304)

The liquidator will settle the debts of the company after deducting the expenses of the liquidation including the wages of the liquidator as per the following order:

1. Amounts due for the workers in the Company
2. Amounts due for the State
3. Rents due for any landlord who leased the property for the company.
4. Other dues as per the priority order stipulated in the relevant laws.

Article (305)

The liquidator, when the dues of the company is settled, should keep the necessary amounts for the payment of the disputed debts. The debts resulted from the liquidation will have the priority over other debts.

Article (306)

The company shall abide by the acts of the liquidator, which are required for the liquidation duty, as long as they are under his authority. No responsibility will be born by the liquidator due to the performance of the above mentioned duties.

Article (307)

The liquidator, in collaboration with the company auditor, will make an inventory for all the assets and liabilities of the company within three months from undertaking his duties. The managers or the board of directors should present the ledgers, documents, explanations and statements of the company, which are required by him. The liquidator must give the explanations and statements about the status of the liquidation when demanded by the partners.

If the liquidation persists for more than one year, the liquidator must prepare the balance sheet, loss and profit accounts and report about the liquidation duties. These documents will be submitted to the partners or general assembly or court, as the case may be, for their approval as per the articles of association or statute of the company.

However, the liquidation period of the company cannot be more than three years except with a decision of the court or ministry.

Article (308)

The liquidator after the payment of the company debts should return to the partners the cash value of their shares in the capital and the surplus should be distributed to them as per the share of each in the profit.

The material property of the company will be distributed among the partners by sorting, following the principles prescribed for the distribution of the joint property, unless the articles of the association of the company stipulate otherwise.

Article (309)

If the net properties of the company are not enough for settling the shares of the partners completely, the loss will be distributed among them as per the percentage determined for distributing the losses.

Article (310)

The liquidator, when the liquidation process is over, should submit a final account to the partners or the general assembly or the court about the liquidation process. The liquidation will not end until the partners or the general assembly or the court ratify the final account. The liquidator must declare the end of liquidation and the end of liquidation will not be applied for others except from the date of declaration. The liquidator, after the completion of the liquidation process, will request to delete the enrollment of the company in the Commercial Registry.

Article (311)

The dismissal of the liquidator will be in the same method followed for his appointment. Any decision or judgement to dismiss a liquidator should include the appointment of a new liquidator.

The dismissal of the liquidator will not be applied for others except from the date of declaration in this regard.

Article (312)

The claim against the liquidator due to the liquidation process will not be entertained after three years from the declaration of the end of liquidation. The suit against the partners regarding the business of the company or against the managers or the board of directors or auditors due to the performance of their duties, will not be heard after the expiry of the above period.

The reports resulted from the supervision and monitoring will be submitted to the Minister to take the appropriate actions in this regard.

Article (317)

The Minister may depute the employees, who are authorized for the judicial capturing, to attend the meetings of the General Assemblies of the companies without having any responsibility for the government towards the shareholders or those who have interest in the Company. The concerned parties should issue a report of the general assembly meeting to establish the attendance of the Ministry deputies. These employees will not have the right of expressing any opinion or voting and their duties are limited to write down the events of the meeting in a special report to be issued after the meeting.

Article (318)

Every shareholder and every partner in the companies registered under the provisions of this Law will have the right to review the information and documents published about the company.

Article (319)

The shareholders or the partners who hold (20%) of the capital of the shareholding company or limited liability company or equities partnership company may request the Minister to issue an order of inspection regarding the serious violations attributed to the board of directors or accounts controllers with respect to their duties prescribed by the law or statute of the company, whenever there are reasons that outweigh these violations.

The request should include the evidences from which it can be understood that the requestors have serious reasons that justify such procedure. The partners who submit the request should also deposit the shares hold by them, which will remain deposited until the decision is taken in the subject.

The Minister will refer the request to the concerned department in the Ministry, which hears the statements of the inspection requestors, board of directors, accounts auditors and those seem to them necessary to hear their statements. Then they prepare a report about the result of its works including their opinion and submit the same to the Minister.

Article (320)

The Minister, after having reviewed the report mentioned in the foregoing paragraph, may appoint under a resolution from him on account of the inspection requestors, an accounts auditor who is enrolled with the auditors registry to conduct the inspection on the business of the company and its ledgers.

The board of directors and employees of the company should furnish the auditor assigned for inspection with everything related to the affairs of the Company such as ledgers, documents and records which are kept by them or they have the right to possess them.

The auditor assigned for inspection should submit a detailed report about his duty to the Minister within the time fixed in the appointment order.

Article (321)

If it is known to the Minister that the violations attributed by the inspection requestors to the board of directors or the auditors are not correct, he may order to publish the report fully or partially or its result in two local newspapers published in Arabic and to impose the expenses of publication without prejudicing the responsibility of compensation, if applicable, on the inspection requestors.

Article (322)

The general assembly may decide to dismiss the directors or controllers and file liability cases against them. Its decision will be valid if the shareholders or partners who hold half of the capital after removing the shares of the person who is supposed to be dismissed from the board of directors ratify such decision.

The dismissed directors cannot be re-elected to the board of directors before the expiration of five years from their dismissal.

Twelfth Chapter Punishments

Article (323)
